• Introduce a right to roam law – similar to those that are in place in Scotland and countries such as Sweden. Allowing access to land for walking etc. where there are no crops and away from housing (including gardens). The current rules on access land are a good start!

• Improving the availability of public footpaths and access land in easier to use maps. The current natural England site feels a bit limited and quite slow to navigate and find information. Possible bringing the information under gov.uk. A website produced by the Dorset coast forum (icoast.co.uk) provides information on walking routes as well as a number of other recreational activities in an easy to use site.
