Grey squirrels are intelligent little animals that have adapted to live in a variety of habitats in the UK. They are misunderstood creatures who should have their needs respected and who should not have to be culled or euthanized if they are injured. I will guarantee that whoever has made this awful decision to set forth this horrendous law has never held or had the love of a Grey squirrel nor have they taken the time to realise the joy they bring to the public in general. So why would anyone want them gone?
