Written evidence submitted by Wooler Red Squirrel Group

As a member of a local group I am seeing the increase of grey squirrels - we are struggling to combat this increase and keep the red squirrels’ numbers up, but it seems like an impossible task. On no account should the grey squirrel be removed from the invasive species list.

Also, in the south of England – Sussex specifically, I have also been aware of the increase of marsh frogs, which could become detrimental to native amphibians and other water life.
