I am in favour of decriminalisation of Prostitution. Its labelling as a crime is of no value to society, to women, nor to the customers. Moreover it harms the children of the workers in the trade. Trafficking is already a crime and so is violence. These are the only crimes which should be associated with this industry otherwise you drive it underground where it is unsafe, suspicious and devoid of protections for the sex worker. Many sex workers are forced into the industry by addiction and slavery. To further criminalise either the worker or the employer is to create a black market which increases crime and persecution. Many men get rich on the slavery caused by the criminalisation of the worker and the industry as a whole. Follow the New Zealand example which is well documented and proven successful.
