I am making this submission as a concerned individual over the use of abortion in cases other than rape or where the death of the mother may be caused.

I do not believe the UK Government should necessarily interfere in a devolved administration, and especially so when pressure groups having a particular ideology are applying pressure on the Government. I therefore make my submission as follows:-

1. Is it right to use abortion as a method of birth control? I submit that it isn’t, there are many alternative forms of control available which do not mean the death of a life form;
2. Does abortion provide a method of control over a womans’ body? Yes, it probably does, but at a huge cost - the life of an unborn and the subsequent emotional trauma of a woman once she comes to realise what she has done - and they do eventually!
3. Abortion is contrary to the laws of God;
4. Is it right to abort an unborn child? How can it be, it is life? It is also amazing and so contradictory that the NHS and parents go to such extreme lengths to save a pregnancy and a newly born life, yet are also prepared to spend time, effort and money on killing other life - just because it is inconvenient or unwanted;
5. There are many prospective parents who are unable to have a child and who would love to have the opportunity to adopt a baby. Instead of abortion, this could be a much better outcome for all concerned;
6. Therefore, I submit that the UK Government should action the removal of limitation of the use of abortion wherever it occurs, but that it should not interfere in a devolved administration.
