Written submission from S Hughes (ANI0089)

As someone who lives in Northern Ireland (and have done so since birth) I wish to respond to the questions you have set out regarding abortion in the province. I strongly believe that it should be up to the people of the province to decide if the law on abortion should change. My view is that it must not change as this will lead to the destruction of many valuable children. In the mainland far more babies have been killed than ever expected when abortion was first legalised and I would not want that here. Abortion clearly attacks the most vulnerable who cannot speak for themselves and so rely on government and the medical profession to protect them.
