I understand that the committee is accepting letters on the abortion law. Only 2 years ago the lives of unborn children were protected and now it seems to be up for debate again.

I have lived in Northern Ireland all my life and I believe its current law surrounding abortion should be upheld. There is no need to feel pressure to copy other countries just because they think differently. A million people saying something wrong doesn’t make it any less wrong.

I am a Christian and believe life starts at conception as the bible states. However I know that this is no longer a Christian country so instead I’ll just state that in 2016, 98% of abortions in Great Britain were carried out for social reasons. If the abortion law is changed, it degrades commitment and family life and undermines those who have no voice to speak up for themselves.

Please make sure you are not just listening to people who want an easy way out from responsibility.
