Written submission from Rae and David Burnett (ANI0135)

We write to you as members of the general Northern Ireland public; Rae writes as a woman and mother in Northern Ireland and we believe that the law on Abortion here should remain unchanged.

Other parts of the United Kingdom changed Abortion rules in 1967 but, at that time, promises were made that this would not lead to ‘Abortion on demand’. But, of course, that is what this has led to and in GB expectant mothers are murdering their unborn children for the slightest reasons. We really do not want such unrestricted killing of babies in Northern Ireland.

There is a lot of talk about the human rights of the expectant mother. But what about the human rights of the unborn baby? How can the killing of these children be justified, just because the mother doesn’t want to continue with the pregnancy? How can she be allowed to kill the defenceless child within her?

We would urge you to reject pressure from outside Northern Ireland and allow our laws on Abortion to remain as they are.
