I am writing to respond to the Women and Equalities Committee request for the views of the people of Northern Ireland.

As a private individual and a subject of Her Majesty the Queen living in Northern Ireland, I wish to place on record my concerns over the potential imposition of any new laws regarding abortion.

Our MLA’s have clearly shown their unified support for our present legislation, which has been upheld by the Court of appeal in Belfast. This is the will of the people, as expressed through the due processes of democracy, and Westminster must defend the right of Northern Ireland to make and maintain it’s own laws.

We may not conform to the pattern of the modern world but that does not make us wrong, only different. Many of us in this peculiar country still believe in the sanctity of life and the protection of the unborn child, under ever circumstance. The strength and depth of this moral and ethical position on this subject, is very strong here, and we will seek to defend it come what may.

Recent events and changes to the law in the republic of Ireland have proven what happens when you move away from this position.

We respectfully ask that our unique laws in Northern Ireland be respected and would argue that GB should repeal their laws in line with ours, not the other way round.

Abortion is the greatest evil of mankind, a holocaust that has destroyed more life than any other atrocity. It fundamentally undermines the human rights of the most vulnerable in our society, the unborn.

Please do not interfere in our affairs. The will of the people is clear and in our democracy this can not be over-ruled by the pressure tactics of a vociferous minority in the pro-abortion lobby at Westminster.
