I live in Northern Ireland and I am proud of our existing abortion laws. These laws have saved an estimated 100,000 lives in Northern Ireland whilst there have been almost 9 million victims since the 1967 Abortion Act came into existence in the rest of the UK.

In this age of human rights it seems strange that Westminster would seek to undermine the human rights of the unborn child. This is particularly confusing as in 2016, 98% of abortions in Great Britain were carried out for social reasons. I therefore do not want the current laws in Northern Ireland to be changed.
