1) Westminster would be furious if Scotland should try to impose moral laws on England, and similarly Westminster should not set out to bypass the democratic wish of Northern Ireland's MPs on the abortion issue, even without an Executive, and if Westminster claims to be internationally obliged to reform abortion law in NI, it begs the question are we ruled by dictatorship or democracy.

2) The law against murder of a human being is effective once a baby is born. Is it not farcical to say that murder has not taken place if deliberate death is caused when that human being is still inside the mother? The unborn human being in its vulnerable state has the right to be protected at all stages of its development.
