As a resident of Northern Ireland I am somewhat concerned that you the House of Commons committee are considering changing the law on abortion in Northern Ireland. I believe that the Norther Ireland law should surely be respected by Westminster, who should not even be considering bypassing the will of our own elected representatives in February 2016. I also note that the Supreme Court also upheld this view on 7 June 2018.

So far it has been estimated he 100,000 babies’ lives have been saved in Norther Ireland because of the existing law. In contrast it has been estimated that since the 1967 when the abortion act was brought into force in 1967, over 9 million babies have been aborted. Many of these, an estimated 98%, were simply because the mothers did not want them for social reasons.

A baby is a baby from the moment of conception, and as such has the same human right to life as anyone of us.

My point is simple, a baby is a part of a mother and unfortunately after an abortion that ‘blood tie’ is still there. This leaves the mother feeling robbed of part of her body, and in deep grief. Instead of abortion the child, the mother needs someone to come along side of her and help her, rather than encouraging her to kill her baby.

It is important to note that during these stages a woman’s hormones are all over the place, which is causing her to panic as well. Sadly I feel that many of those performing these procedures don’t really care about the mother and the issues she may well face afterwards, as long as they are making money from it.
