1) DEVOLUTION
Northern Ireland is a devolved country and as such, important issues such as abortion should be made by our politicians. Taking this issue out of our hands disempowers the people of Northern Ireland; men and women.
The fact that our Assembly is currently suspended should not be used as an opportunity to rush through legislation that has such a huge importance. Indeed, it would set a precedent for the other devolved governments.

2) DISTINCTIVE LAW AND CULTURE
Northern Ireland is the safest place in the UK to be an unborn baby. This is how we should remain. A place where every life is valued, no matter their ability.
100000 lives have been saved by Northern Ireland’s refusal to adopt the 1967 Abortion Act. The lives of countless disabled people and those with Down’s Syndrome Downside have been protected. This must not change.

3) HUMAN RIGHTS & EQUALITY
The current law in Northern Ireland has not only saved 100000 lives since the 1967 Abortion Act in England, Scotland and Wales; but furthermore it has saved 100000 women from making the decision to end the lives of their babies. This is a protection that I am proud of as a citizen of Northern Ireland and it must remain.
Our work must be in reaching out to mothers and children in crisis, not enabling abortions hoping to alleviate society’s problems. Nothing could be further from the truth as mental health problems continue to rise.
